

INTERNET ARCHIVE
300 Funston Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94118

Milano, June 13th 2012

Via e.mail - Fax

RE: Offensive post Archieve.org

In the name and on behalf of my client Pirames International S.r.l., I point out and communicate you as follows.

On May 17, 2012, my client, upon performance of an online research through the "Google" online research engine, acknowledged that anonymous persons advertised on your website false and offensive information concerning my client (<http://archive.org/post/412012/false-copyright-claims-believe-and-amp-pirames-international-srl>); on the same date, therefore, Pirames informed you on such circumstance, urging you to remove such post.

Neither response being received, nor the mentioned post being removed, on May 21 and 30, 2012 Pirames submitted to you further requests of removal.

At last, by e-mail dated June 1, 2012 you acknowledged my client's communication and denied any liability.

In particular, you claimed that, on one hand, "as a digital archive and open public service, Internet Archive does not take it upon itself to evaluate the veracity, offensiveness, or inherent overall value of posted material" and that, on the other hand, "Internet Archive is not well-positioned to judge the validity of the assertion that the content in question is offensive, untrue, and/or damaging" concluding that "In such instances, we are generally disposed to err on the side of allowing freedom of speech".

The correctness of your claims is hereby firmly denied, since Pirames denounced the fact you are in the legally obligation to remove that defamatory post or you have to be considered jointly responsible for the damage caused to Pirames International Srl.

Considered the foregoing, in the name and on behalf of Pirames International S.r.l., I officially request you to remove the post, save any right to request you compensation for any damages suffered so far.

I inform you that upon expiration of 15 days from receipt of this communication without any response from your side, I will be bound, on the basis on my assignment, to sue you before the competent Courts in order to safeguard the rights and interests of my clients, with a consequent rise of charges on your side.

Yours sincerely

